STAYING CURRENT AND CONTRIBUTING TO DISCIPLINE/ACADEMIC FIELD

“Writing for Publication: Rationale, Process, and Pitfalls” by P.A. Witt. This article, originally published in the Journal of Park and Recreation Administration, This article presents a rationale for publishing in an academic setting beyond perish-avoidance., steps in submitting an article for publication, manuscript preparation problems and recommendations for overcoming them. Audience: Faculty in all disciplines

“Professional Growth for Advisors: Strategies for Building Professional Advising Networks” by R. Bryant, A. Chagani, J. Endres, and J. Galvin. Describes the benefits and opportunities of professional networks. Audience: Counselors

“Writing the Literature Review: Tips for Academic Librarians” by C. Kellsey. This article, published in the College & Research Libraries News, provides an overview of the process of writing a literature review for research. Audience: Faculty in all disciplines, Librarians

“Developing as a Writer: Refereeing Manuscripts for Peer-Reviewed LIS Journals” by P. M. Edwards. Although this article, published in the College & Research Libraries News, is written from the perspective on LIS journals, the rationale for professional benefits of being a referee, recommendations for becoming a referee, and suggestions for reviewing manuscripts apply to anyone in post-secondary education. Audience: Faculty in all disciplines, Librarians, Counselors

“A Librarian’s Journal Club: A Forum for Sharing Ideas and Experiences” by T. Hickman and L. Allen. This article, published in the College & Research Libraries News, describes how to create a collegial group for reading and sharing professional literature. Audience: Faculty in all disciplines, Librarians