Why Should I Community Build?

"No significant learning can occur with a significant relationship"
James Comer

Building a classroom community, whether it be in person, online, or a hybrid class is a crucial step to creating an inviting learning environment. So while you are planning the content for the course you are creating take a moment to think about the opportunities that your students have for getting to know one another, learning from each other, and to collaborate on new ideas. Find the balance that works best for you and your students to make your course a success!

What does it look like?

- Getting Acquainted
- Value Multiple Perspectives
- Joining of Ideas

How does it make student feel?

- Connected
- Safe
- Positive

Looking for ideas or activities to use in your classroom? Stop by the West Campus CTL or call us at (907) 582-5862.

powered by Pliktocart
make information beautiful